

Darre, Richard Walther

(1895--1953), Nazi ideologist and German Minister of Food and Agriculture from 1933--1942. Darre depicted a connection between the blood of the German race and the soil, and helped develop the idea of Lebensraum—acquiring more "living space" for Germany. The Nuremberg Military Tribunals sentenced him to five years' imprisonment, but he was released in 1950.
