Graduate Spotlight

Every year, the International School for Holocaust Studies holds hundreds of educational activities, in a dozen languages, for over 300,000 students and educators in Israel and around the world. Featured here is one of the School’s graduates, and what she has achieved since:

In 2014, Anita Lanszki, an assistant lecturer at the Hungarian Dance Academy and teacher at the ELTE University in Budapest, attended a pedagogical seminar at Yad Vashem’s International School for Holocaust Studies. Lanszki has since become a leading member of the ever-growing group of Hungarian graduates of the International School. “I encountered a whole new approach to history at Yad Vashem,” said Lanszki. “The Holocaust is not only a chapter in a book. It was a concrete process with real people. It happened with men, women and children like us. They were witnesses, victims, perpetrators, collaborators, rescuers and killers.”

The pupils were asked to create digital stories based on three essential components: research, original testimony and their own connection to the topic.

On an annual basis, the Hungarian Section of the International School’s European Department proposes project topics for its graduate network. When Section Head Dr. Chava Baruch suggested making digital stories (short films) for the 2015 project, they contacted Lanszki, and asked her to take a leading role. Lanszki, who is currently studying towards a PhD in digital education, agreed to lend her expertise, joining Baruch and local partner Szilvia Pető-Dittel in a project that attracted more than 40 Hungarian Yad Vashem graduates.

After writing instructions on the technical aspects of creating digital stories, Lanszki organized a study day for the participating graduates at the Holocaust Documentation Center (HDC) in Budapest. The graduates’ pupils were asked to create digital stories based on three essential components: research in libraries and archives as well as of personal artifacts; original testimony from Holocaust survivors; and the pupils’ own connection to the topic. While the graduates offered guidance and ensured historical accuracy, the pupils had to find an appropriate balance between two voices: that of the survivors, recounting their stories; and that of the pupils themselves, describing the personal impact of their discoveries in the course of their research.

Thirteen such digital stories competed for first place at a follow-up study day at the HDC in October 2015. Using Yad Vashem’s methodology, educational philosophy and age-appropriate approach as benchmarks, Lanszki, Baruch and Pető-Dittel screened and rated the stories for historical accuracy and the required balance between the survivors and the pupils. Over 100 graduates attended the screening, and media coverage exceeded the organizers’ expectations.

The winning entry was submitted by Dorottya Kocsis, who was mentored by Yad Vashem graduate Nora Kunos. Kocsis’ story recounts the wartime experiences of her grandmother, Mária Árvai, who worked in the home of the Zimmermanns, a Jewish family that was eventually deported to Auschwitz. Balancing the story of the victims with Dorottya’s emotional journey through research and interviews, and adding authentic photographs from the time and place of the events, the film concluded with a dedicatory message in memory of the Zimmermann family as well as Mária. “If they link faces, everyday stories and objects to the events, the learners can get closer to understanding this historical tragedy,” said Lanszki.

The author works in the European Department, International School for Holocaust Studies.

Education Agreement with Albania

The Prime Minister of Albania, H. E. Mr. Edi Rama, visited Yad Vashem on 21 December. During their tour of the Holocaust History Museum, Prime Minister Rama and his wife Linda took a special interest in the section devoted to the Righteous Among the Nations – non-Jews who rescued Jews during the Holocaust. Yad Vashem’s online exhibition, “BESA: A Code of Honor,” tells the unique story of how Muslim Albanians helped rescue hundreds of Jews during the Holocaust.

The Prime Minister was also present at the signing of an historic agreement between the Albanian Ministry of Education and Sport and Yad Vashem. This memorandum outlines several projects in the field of teacher training in Holocaust education, including a future seminar for Albanian educators at Yad Vashem’s International School for Holocaust Studies that will be accredited by the Ministry.

Signing the memorandum was Albanian Ambassador to Israel H.E. Mr. Bardhyl Canaj (left) and Dr. Eyal Kaminka, Lily Safra Chair of Holocaust Education and Director of the International School for Holocaust Studies (right). Also present was Richelle Budd Caplan, Director of the European Department at the International School.